

No. of Mantras.	Page
6.—The advantage of having a hundred Princes, Kshatriyas, &c., on each side,	582
7.—Ditto of the four hundred collectively,	ib.

SECTION VI.

Repetition of mantras on the drops of water as they trickle down from the body of the horse after it has been bathed.

1.—Should drops of water trickle down the body of the Horse after bathing, the mantras beginning with agnes'váhe , &c., should be repeated,	582
2.—The number of mantras to be repeated (vide 7th Kánda 1 Prapáthaka),	583
3.—Option on the subject,	584
4.—The drops of the water being typical of homa offerings, the word s'váhá is to be repeated after the mantras,	ib.
5.—The drops being homa offerings, the earth is to be reckoned as the sacrificial fire,	ib.
6.—The propriety of repeating the mantras illustrated by an anecdote,	ib.
7.—The object of the first mantra,	585
8.—Ditto of the next nine mantras,	ib.
9.—Ditto of the ten mantras collectively,	ib.
10.—According to a preceding rule, a thousand mantras should be repeated, this should not be effected by repeating each mantra consecutively a hundred times, but by reciting the ten mantras successively,	ib.
11.—The ten mantras to be repeatedly recited to complete the thousand,	586
12.—Anecdote for obviating the evil effects of omissions and errors,	ib.

SECTION VII.

The Adhvaryu to sprinkle water from all the four sides.

1.—Sprinkling from the east, facing the west,	587
--	-----